

On Agriculture & Antitrust: A Brief Summary of Legislative History

Jonathan Coppess

Department of Agricultural and Consumer Economics
University of Illinois

May 5, 2022

farmdoc daily (12): 64

Gardner Policy Series

Recommended citation format: Coppess, J. “On Agriculture & Antitrust: A Brief Summary of Legislative History.” farmdoc daily (12): 64, Department of Agricultural and Consumer Economics, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, May 5, 2022.

Permalink: <https://farmdocdaily.illinois.edu/2022/05/on-agriculture-antitrust-a-brief-summary-of-legislative-history.html>

Increased prices, new and continuing supply chain problems, and more in the wake of Russia’s unprovoked war on Ukraine and the Covid-19 pandemic may be reinvigorating discussions and questions about the markets, competition, antitrust and agriculture (see e.g., farmdoc daily, April 26, 2022; April 13, 2022; April 5, 2022; and Irwin, April 14, 2022). From fertilizer prices to cattle markets, the issues are increasingly in the spotlight, front and center in policy discussions (see e.g., U.S. Senate, Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, Hearing, April 26, 2022; House Committee on Agriculture, Hearings, April 27, 2022). Antitrust and competition policies possess a long, complicated history and agriculture has often been in the middle of the discussion. For background to the discussion, this article presents a summary review of the legislative history for the major antitrust, antimonopoly and fair competition statutes.

Background

U.S. antitrust legislation originated in the era known as the Gilded Age at the end of the 19th Century; it was the reign of the Robber Barons, famous names such as Andrew Carnegie, John Pierpont Morgan and John D. Rockefeller. The years around the turn of the 20th Century were dominated by the Trust Movement, in which economic concepts were mixed with Social Darwinism to achieve the goal of monopoly control across all sectors. At the time, the trusts were new entities that sought to eliminate competition and competitors, accumulating vast amounts of wealth and power, including political power. As just one example, to create the U.S. Steel monopoly, J.P. Morgan bought out Andrew Carnegie for an amount that made Carnegie the richest man in the world. Morgan also created the Northern Securities Company to monopolize the western railroads and, of course, Rockefeller created the Standard Oil Company, which monopolized the oil industry and abused power through a cartel with the railroads. For American agriculture these issues were prevalent and important; commodity trusts were also created, including for tobacco, cotton and sugar, while monopolization in the railroad sector was particularly problematic for farmers. (see e.g., Sawyer 2019; Wu 2018; Hovenkamp 2015).

We request all readers, electronic media and others follow our citation guidelines when re-posting articles from farmdoc daily. Guidelines are available here. The farmdoc daily website falls under University of Illinois copyright and intellectual property rights. For a detailed statement, please see the University of Illinois Copyright Information and Policies here.

Discussion: Legislative History of Antitrust Law

(1) The Sherman Antitrust Act, 1890

Senator John Sherman (R-OH), the younger brother of the famous Civil War general William T. Sherman, introduced legislation to protect trade and commerce from “unlawful restraints and monopoly” (S.1 of the 51st Congress; December 4, 1889; H. Rept. 51-1707). On the Senate floor, he argued against the “new form of combination commonly called trusts, that seeks to avoid competition” by “placing the power and property of the combination under a few individuals, and often under the control of a single man” and that the “sole object of such a combination is to make competition impossible.” He added that if the “concentrated powers of this combination are intrusted [sic] to a single man, it is a kingly prerogative, inconsistent with our form of government, and should be subject to the strong resistance of the State and national authorities,” because if the United States “will not endure a king as a political power we should not endure a king over the production, transportation, and sale of any of the necessities of life” (Congressional Record, March 21, 1890, at 2457).

Figure 1. Summary of Votes on Sherman Antitrust Act

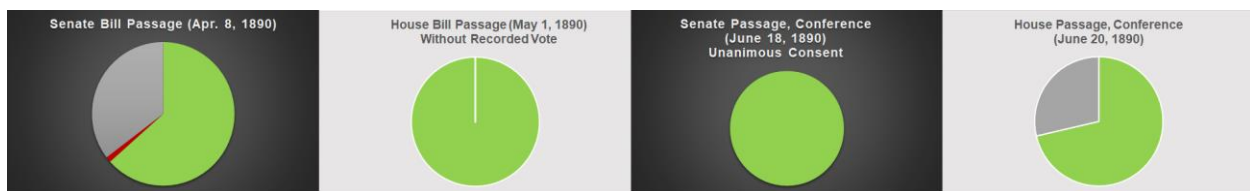

Figure 2. Summary of Sherman Antitrust Act

Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890
Sec. 1: “Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal.”	Sec. 2: “Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize, or combine or conspire with any other person or persons, to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty...”	Sec. 3: “Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce . . . is hereby declared illegal”

The Sherman Act passed the Senate on April 8, 1890, by a vote of 52 to 1 (29 absent) (Congressional Record, April 8, 1890, at 3152-43). The House amended the Senate bill and passed it without a recorded vote on May 1, 1890 (Congressional Record, May 1, 1890, at 4104). The Senate concurred in the conference report on June 18, 1890, by unanimous consent and without further debate or votes (Congressional Record, June 18, 1890, at 6208). The House agreed to the conference report on June 20, 1890, by a vote of 212 to 0 (85 not voting) (Congressional Record, June 20, 1890, at 6314). President Benjamin Harrison, the 23rd President (1889 to 1893) and graduate of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, signed the Sherman Act into law on July 2, 1890 (Congressional Record, July 2, 1890, at 6922; The White House, Presidents: Benjamin Harrison). Figure 1 illustrates the voting in Congress on the Sherman Act and Figure 2 summarizes the Act's key provisions.

(2) The Clayton Antitrust Act, 1914

The Sherman Antitrust Act languished somewhat in the hands of the Courts and the Department of Justice, until the presidency of Theodore Roosevelt, the country's most famous Trustbuster. Roosevelt's DOJ first went after Morgan's Northern Securities Company in 1902 (Morris 2001, at 87-93; Sawyer 2019). It would be two dozen years before Congress took up the issue again.

On April 14, 1914, Representative Henry De Lamar Clayton Jr. (D-AL), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, introduced legislation to supplement the Sherman Antitrust Act (63rd Congress, 2d Session; H.R. 15657). The House agreed to the bill on June 5, 1914, by a vote of 277 to 54 (3 voted present; 99 not voting) (Congressional Record, June 5, 1914, at 9911). The Senate agreed to the legislation on September 2, 1914, by a vote of 46 to 16 (34 not voting) (Congressional Record, September 2, 1914, at 14610). The Senate agreed to the conference report on October 5, 1914, by a vote of 35 to 24 (37 not voting) (Congressional Record, October 5, 1914, at 16170). The House passed the conference report on October 8, 1914, by a vote of 245 to 52 (5 voted present; 126 not voting) (Congressional Record, October 8, 1914, at 16344). President Woodrow Wilson signed the Clayton Antitrust Act into law on October 15, 1914 (see, Congressional Record, October 16, 1914, at 16756; P.L. 63-212). Figures 3 illustrates the votes on the Clayton Act and Figure 4 summarizes key provisions.

Figure 3. Votes on Clayton Antitrust Act

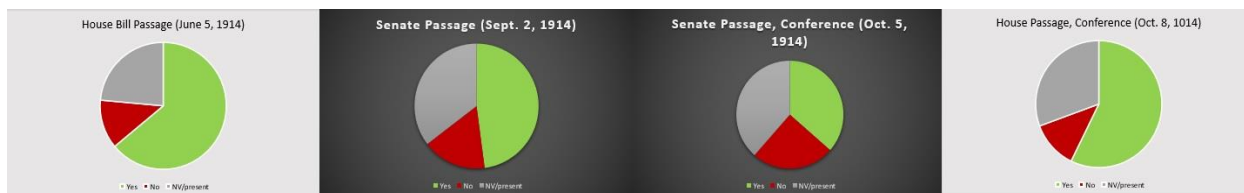

Figure 4. Summary of Clayton Antitrust Act

Clayton Antitrust Act of 1914
Sec. 2: "That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly to discriminate in price between purchasers of commodities...where the effect of such discrimination may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce..."	Sec. 3: "That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, to lease or make a sale or contract for sale of goods [etc.]...or fix a price charged therefor...where the effect of such lease, sale, or contract for sale or such condition, agreement or understanding may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce."	Sec. 6: "That the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce. Nothing contained in the antitrust laws shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations, instituted for the purposes of mutual help, and not having capital stock or conducted for profit..."	Sec. 7: "That no corporation engaged in commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share of capital of another corporation engaged in commerce, where the effect of such acquisition may be to substantially lessen competition...or tend to create a monopoly of any line of commerce."

(3) The Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921

Introduced by Representative Gilbert N. Haugen (R-IA), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, on May 8, 1921, to “regulate interstate and foreign commerce in live[]stock, live-stock products, dairy products, poultry, poultry products and eggs” and providing the Secretary of Agriculture with “jurisdiction over the packers, stockyards, commission men, traders, buyers, and sellers in the stockyard” (67th Congress, 1st Session; H.R. 6320; H. Rept. 67-77). The House agreed to the bill without a recorded vote on May 31, 1921 (Congressional Record, May 31, 1921, at 1932). The Senate agreed to its version of the bill on June 17, 1921, by a vote of 45 to 21 (30 not voting) (Congressional Record, June 17, 1921, at 2713). The conference committee reported a final version of the legislation on August 2, 1921 (H. Rept. 67-324). The Senate agreed to the conference report on August 4, 1921, by a vote of 48 to 10 (38 not voting) (Congressional Record, August 4, 1921, at 4644). The House agreed to the conference report on August 9, 1921, again without a recorded vote (Congressional Record, August 9, 1921, at 4787). President Warren G. Harding signed it into law on August 15, 1921 (P.L. 67-51). Figure 5 illustrates the votes in Congress on the Packers & Stockyards Act and Figure 6 provides a summary of key provisions.

Figure 5. Votes on P&SA 1921

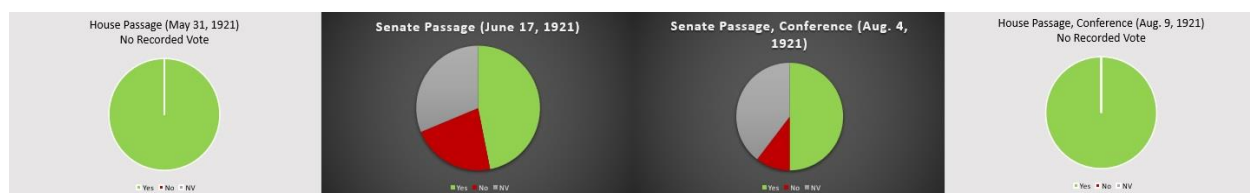

Figure 6. Summary of P&SA 1921

Packers & Stockyards Act of 1921
Sec. 202: "It shall be unlawful for any packer to: (a) Engage in or use any unfair, unjustly discriminatory, or deceptive practice or device in commerce; or (b) Make or give, in commerce, any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage...; or (c) Sell or otherwise transfer to or for any other packer...for the purpose or with the effect of apportioning the supply in commerce between any such packers, if such apportionment has the tendency or effect of restraining commerce or of creating a monopoly in commerce; or..."	Sec. 202 (cont.): "(d) Sell or otherwise transfer to or for any other person, or buy or otherwise receive from or for any other person, any article for the purpose or with the effect of manipulating or controlling prices in commerce, or of creating a monopoly in the acquisition of, buying, selling, or dealing in, any article in commerce, or of restraining commerce; or (e) Engage in any course of business or do any act for the purpose of or with the effect of manipulating or controlling prices in commerce or creating a monopoly..."	Sec. 202 (cont.): "(f) Conspire, combine, agree, or arrange with any other person (1) to apportion territory for carrying on business in commerce, or (2) to apportion purchases or sales of any article in commerce, or (3) to manipulate or control prices in commerce; or (g) Conspire, combine, agree or arrange with any other person to do, or aid or abet the doing of, any act made unlawful by subdivision (a), (b), (c), (d), or (e)."	Sec. 312: "It shall be unlawful for any stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer to engage in or use any unfair, unjustly discriminatory, or deceptive practice or device in connection with the receiving, marketing, buying or selling on a commission basis or otherwise, feeding, water, holding, delivery, shipment, weighing or handling, in commerce at a stockyard, of live stock ."

(4) The Robinson-Patman Act, 1936: Price Discrimination

Introduced on June 11, 1935, by Representative Wright Patman (D-TX), to make it “unlawful for any person engaged in commerce to discriminate in price or terms of sale” it was not reported out by the House Judiciary Committee until March 31, 1936 (74th Congress, 2d Session, June 11, 1935, H.R. 8442;

H. Rept. 74-2287). Senator Joseph T. Robinson (D-AR) and Senate Majority Leader introduced the Senate version of the price discrimination bill on May 13, 1936, which was reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee on February 3, 1936 (74th Congress, 1st Session, S.3154; S. Rept. 74-1502). The Senate agreed to its version on April 30, 1936, by unanimous consent (Congressional Record, April 30, 1936, at 6436). The House agreed to its version of the bill on a division vote of 290 to 16 on May 28, 1936 (Congressional Record, May 28, 1936, at 8242). The House agreed to the conference report on June 15, 1936, without a recorded vote (Congressional Record, June 15, 1936, at 9422). The Senate agreed to the conference report by unanimous consent on June 18, 1936 (Congressional Record, June 18, 1936, at 9904). President Franklin Roosevelt signed it into law on June 10, 1936, amending Section 2 of the antitrust statute as it had been supplemented by the 1914 Clayton Antitrust Act (P.L. 74-692). Figure 7 illustrates the voting in Congress and Figure 8 summarizes the provisions of the law.

Figure 7. Votes on Price Discrimination Bill, 1936

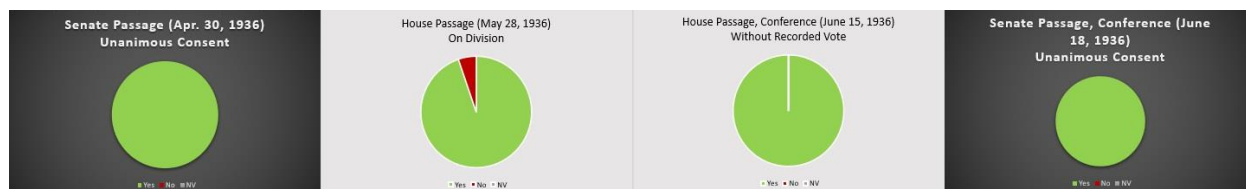

Figure 8. Summary of Price Discrimination Bill, 1936

Robinson-Patman Act of 1936
Sec. 1: Amended Sec. 2 of the Clayton Act to read: "(a) That it should be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between different purchase of commodities of like grade and quality...where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any person who either grants or knowingly receives the benefit of such discrimination, or with customers of either of them..."	Sec. 1 (cont.): "... (e) That it shall be unlawful for any person to discriminate in favor of one purchase against another purchaser or purchasers of a commodity bought for resale...upon terms not accorded to all purchasers on proportionally equal terms. (f) That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, knowingly to induce or receive a discrimination in price which is prohibited by this section."	Sec. 3: "It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, to be a party, or assist in, any transaction of sale, or contract to sell, which discriminates to his knowledge against competitors of the purchaser ...for the purpose of destroying competition, or eliminating a competitor...; or, to sell, or contract to sell, goods at unreasonably low prices for the purpose of destroying competition or eliminating a competitor."

(5) The Celler-Kefauver Act, 1950: Mergers and Acquisitions

Representative Emmanuel Celler (D-NY) introduced legislation to amend the Clayton Antitrust Act on February 15, 1949, which was reported by the House Judiciary Committee August 4, 1949 (81st Congress, 1st Session, February 15, 1949, H.R. 2734; H. Rept. 81-1191). The House passed it on suspension of the rules on August 15, 1949, by a vote of 223 to 92 (117 not voting) (Congressional Record, August 15, 1949, at 11507). The Senate Judiciary Committee reported its amendments to the bill on June 2, 1950 (S. Rept. 81-1775). The Senate did not agree to the bill until December 13, 1950, which Senators passed by a vote of 55 to 22 (19 not voting) (Congressional Record, December 13, 1950, at 16508). The House concurred in the Senate amendments without further consideration or a recorded vote on December 14, 1950 (Congressional Record, December 14, 1950, at 16574). President Harry Truman signed the bill into law on December 29, 1950 (P.L. 81-899). Figure 9 illustrates the votes in Congress and Figure 10 summarizes the amendments to the antitrust laws.

Figure 9. Votes on Celler-Kefauver, 1950

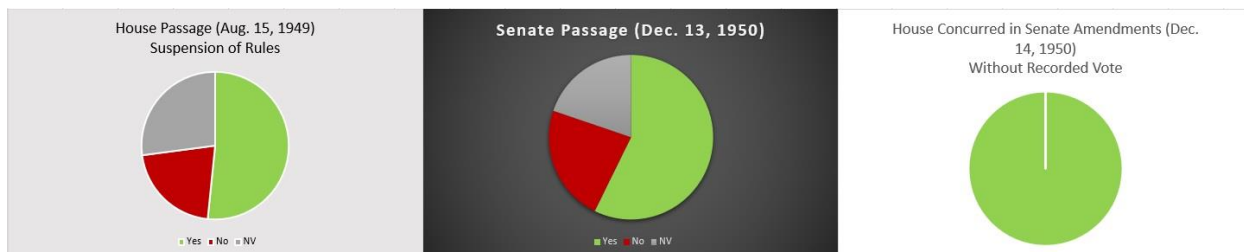

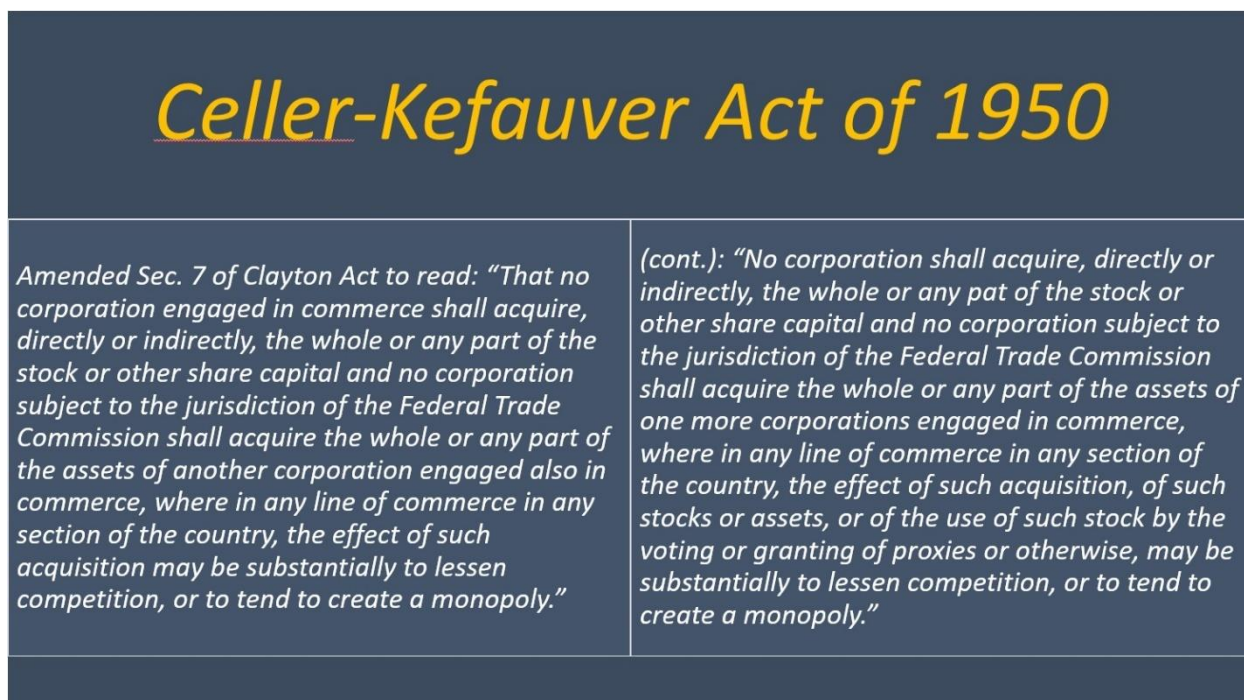

Figure 10. Summary of Celler-Kefauver, 1950

(6) Agricultural Fair Practices Act of 1967

On January 11, 1967, Senator George Aiken (R-VT) introduced legislation to "control unfair trade practices affecting producers of agricultural products and associations of such producers" and, although he was the ranking member of the Agriculture and Forestry Committee, he was listed as the lead in reporting it to the Senate on August 3, 1967 (90th Congress, 1st Session, January 11, 1967, S.109; S. Rept. 90-474). He had introduced the bill in the previous Congress as well. The Senate passed it by unanimous consent on August 4, 1967 (Congressional Record, August 4, 1967, at 21411). The House agreed to an amended version on March 25, 1968, by a vote of 232 to 90 (111 not voting) (Congressional Record, March 25, 1968, at 7468). Senator Aiken, noting that the House had made no major changes to the bill, requested the Senate concur in the House amendment. The Senate concurred in the House amendment by unanimous consent on April 1, 1968 (Congressional Record, April 1, 1968, at 8419). President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the bill into law on April 16, 1968 (P.L. 90-288). Figure 11 illustrates the voting in Congress and Figure 12 summarizes the Act.

Figure 11. Votes on Ag Fair Practices Act, 1967

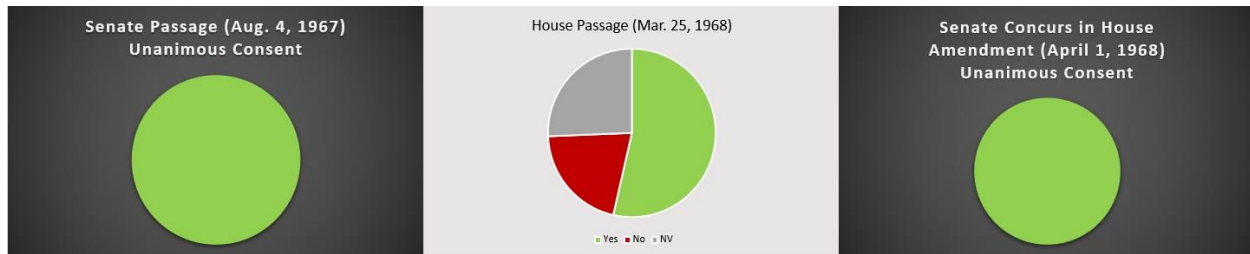

Figure 12. Summary of Ag Fair Practices Act, 1967

Agricultural Fair Practices Act, 1967
Sec. 4: "It shall be unlawful for any handler knowingly to engage or permit any employee or agent to engage in the following: (a) To coerce any producer in the exercise of his right to join and below to or to refrain from joining or belonging to an association of producers, or refuse to deal with any producer because of the exercise of his right... (b) To discriminate against any producer with respect to price, quantity, quality, or other terms of purchase, acquisition, or other handling of agricultural products because of his membership in or contract with an association of producers; or (c) To coerce or intimidate any producer to enter into, maintain, breach, cancel, or terminate a membership agreement or marketing contract with an association of producers or a contract with a handler; or"	(cont.): "(d) To pay or loan money, give any thing of value, or offer any other inducement or reward to a producer for refusing to or ceasing to belong to an association of producers; or (e) To make false reports about the finances, management, or activities of associations of producers or handlers; or (f) To conspire, combine, agree, or arrange with any other person to do, or aid or abet the doing of, any act made unlawful by this Act."

Concluding Thoughts

Today, the antitrust statutes occupy Chapter 1 of the title on Commerce and Trade, with the Sherman Act in the first seven sections (15 U.S.C. §§1-38). Federal law on the matter still opens with the broad declaration that "[e]very contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce . . . is declared illegal" (15 U.S.C. §1). The statute and its legislative history present only part of the history for competition and antitrust law in the United States. The Federal Judiciary has played an enormous and profound role, but any exploration of the topic should begin with the provisions of the U.S. Code and a basic understanding of how the law came to be, and what Congress intended. There is a through line, a single connecting thread that runs through the legislation from 1890 onward, and it is the fundamental importance of competition, the protection of fair, equitable, functional and robust competition. The protection of competition by the rule of law rather than the rule of the wealthiest or most powerful is the North Star of antitrust law.

References

Hovenkamp, Herbert. The Opening of American Law: Neoclassical Legal Thought, 1870-1970 (New York: Oxford University Press 2015).

Morris, Edmund. Theodore Rex (New York: The Modern Library 2001).

Sawyer, Laura Phillips. "US Antitrust Law and Policy in Historical Perspective." In Oxford Research Encyclopedia of American History. 2019, available online:
https://www.hbs.edu/ris/Publication%20Files/19-110_e21447ad-d98a-451f-8ef0-ba42209018e6.pdf.

U.S. House of Representatives, Committee on the Judiciary, "Protection of Trade and Commerce Against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies," Report to accompany S. 1, H. Rept. 51-1707 (51st Congress, 1st Session; April 25, 1890).

U.S. House of Representatives, Committee on Agriculture, "Interstate and Foreign Commerce in Live Stock, Live-Stock Products, Etc.," Report to accompany H.R. 6320, H. Rept. 67-77 (67th Congress, 1st Session; May 18, 1921).

U.S. House of Representatives, "Meat-Packing Industry," Conference Report to accompany H.R. 6320, H. Rept. 67-324 (67th Congress, 1st Session; August 2, 1921).

U.S. House of Representatives, Committee on the Judiciary, "Prohibition on Price Discrimination," Report to accompany H.R. 8442, H. Rept. 74-2287 (74th Congress, 2d Session; March 31, 1936).

U.S. House of Representatives, Committee on the Judiciary, "Amending an Act Entitled "An Act to Supplement Existing Laws Against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies....," Report to accompany H.R. 2734, H. Rept. 81-1191 (81st Congress, 1st Session; August 4, 1949).

U.S. Senate, Committee on the Judiciary, "To Amend Antitrust Act," Report to accompany S.3154, S. Rept. 74-1502 (74th Congress, 2d Session; January 16, 1936)

U.S. Senate, Committee on the Judiciary, "Amending an Act Entitled "An Act to Supplement Existing laws Against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies....," Report to accompany H.R. 2734, S. Rept. 81-1775 (81st Congress, 2d Session; June 2, 1950).

U.S. Senate, Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, "Agricultural Fair Practices," Report to accompany S. 109, S. Rept. 90-474 (90th Congress, 1st Session; August 3, 1967).

Wu, Tim. The Curse of Bigness: Antitrust in the New Gilded Age (New York: Columbia Global Reports 2018).